About

With 10 offices across the country and our headquarters in Washington, DC, FTA manages the federal program supporting public transportation in hundreds of cities, towns and tribal communities by:

- ensuring the safety and reliability of America's transit systems;
- working with transit providers to expand and enhance transit service;
- administering funds for buses, trains and ferry systems;
- providing technical assistance to transit operators in rural and tribal areas; and
- promoting innovation and new technologies in public transportation through a robust research program.

Benefits

FTA promotes diversity and offers opportunities for professional growth.

FTA's average staffer makes over $25,000/year above the national median income.

And benefits include health insurance, flexible work schedules, travel, retirement savings plans.
