CCAM Background

What is the CCAM?

The Coordinating Council on Access and Mobility (CCAM) is an interagency partnership established by Executive Order to coordinate the efforts of the federal agencies that fund transportation services for targeted populations.

Mission

The CCAM issues policy recommendations and implements activities that improve the availability, accessibility, and efficiency of transportation for the following targeted populations:

People with Disabilities

Older Adults

Individuals
of Low Income

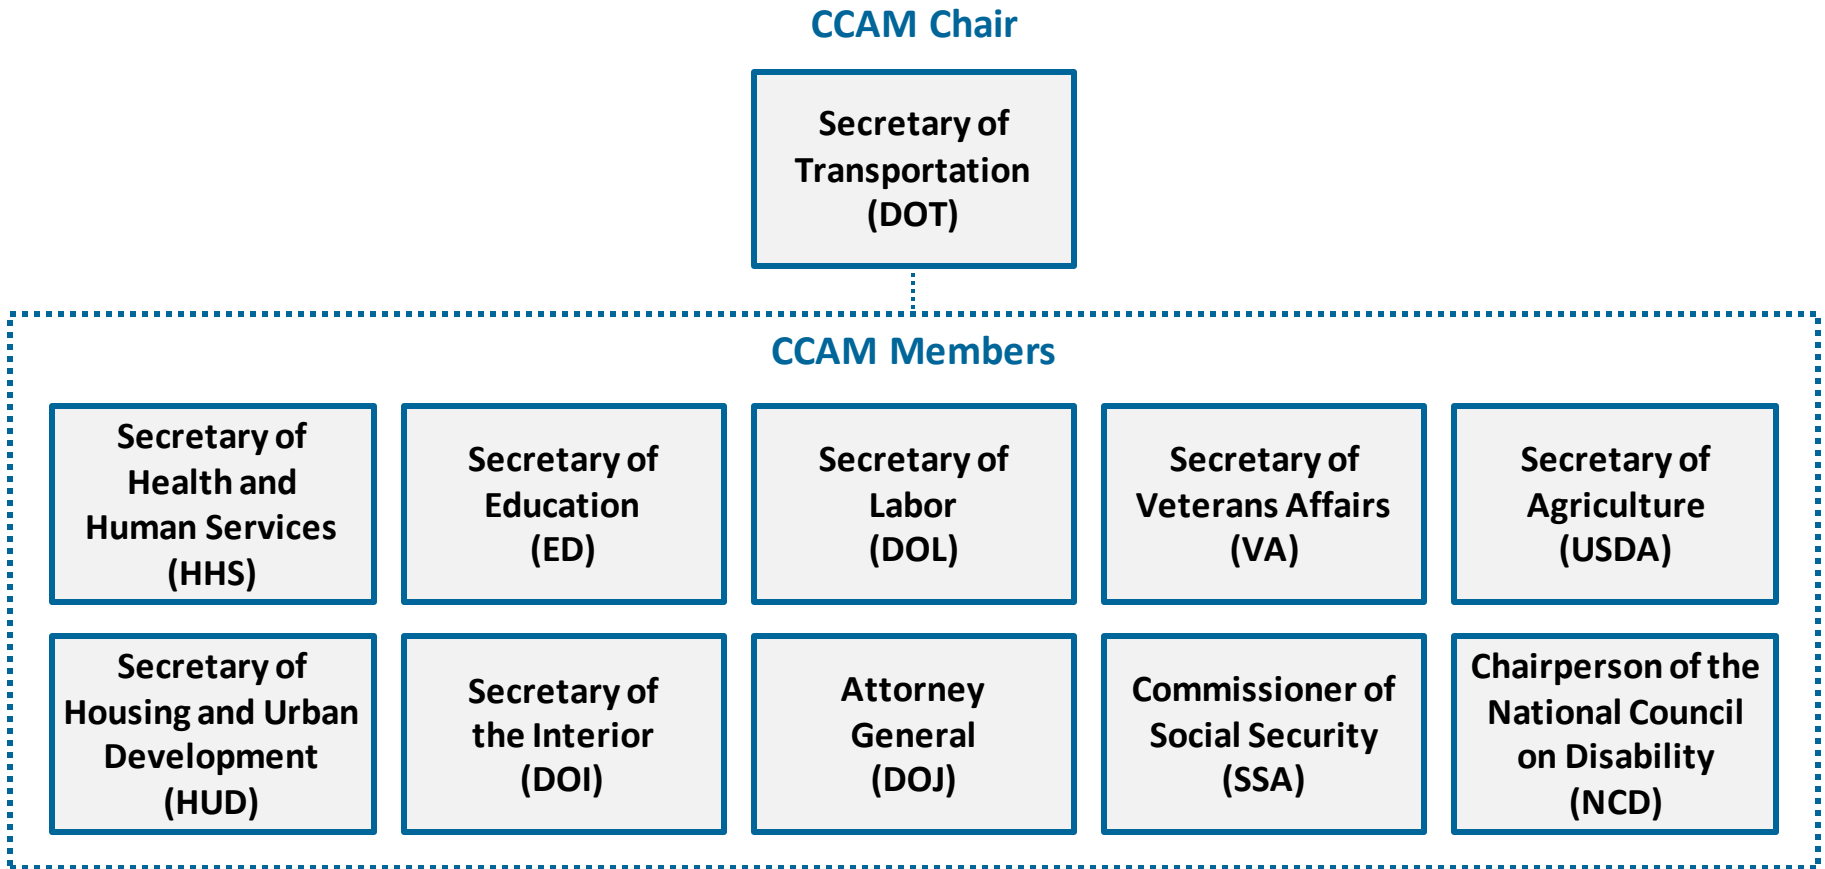

Vision

Equal access to coordinated transportation for all Americans

CCAM

Who serves on the CCAM?

The CCAM consists of the following federal representatives or their designees.

Why is transportation coordination important?

Transportation coordination allows human service providers to assist more people in a cost-efficient manner.

80 federal programs fund transportation for targeted populations...

...but these programs are often duplicative and fragmented.

Coordinated transportation improves:

Efficiency

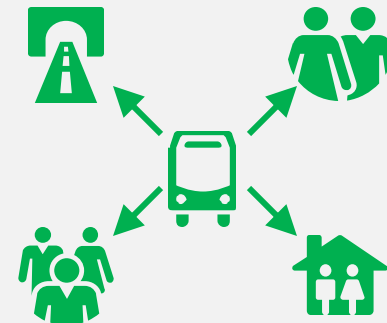

Funding recipients save program funds by sharing resources.

Accessibility

Funding recipients collaborate to provide more route options.

Availability

Streamlined policies allow programs to serve new people and regions.
